New credibility device fielded

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

Soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan are getting a new tool to help them weed out potential terrorists — the Preliminary Credibility Assessment Screening System (PCASS), a hand-held device that works much like a polygraph.

James Waller, an instructor at the Defense Academy for Credibility Assessment (DACA), left Sunday for Afghanistan to train troops on how to use it.

“Right now, our Soldiers are making life and death decisions: who to let or not let on base; who to release (or) who to keep, based on gut decisions,” Waller said. “This is just one tool to be used in the screening process.”

The subject has two wires connected to his fingertips or palm to measure changes in electrical conductivity of the skin. A third wire connected to a finger measures the subject’s intervals between heartbeats. Those wires are connected to a wrist cuff, which in turn is connected via USB to the PCASS.

The subject is asked a series of yes/no questions. The interviewer punches in the responses. PCASS then measures the subject’s physiological reactions and uses an algorithm — a computer program that makes the decisions — to determine if the subject is being truthful.

“The screen will display either red, green or yellow,” Waller explained. “Red means the subject was dishonest and lying to the security questions; green means they passed the test; yellow means the device did not get enough information to make a call so we need to rerun the test.”

Soldiers will use the devices when screening local nationals (it cannot be used on U.S. citizens) applying for jobs at bases in (Operation Iraqi Freedom) and (Operation Enduring Freedom), as well as when looking for suspected roadside bombers.

“Let’s say that we had an IED that was set off. A lot of times a patrol will cordon the area off, round up people from the area and question them,” Waller said. “Using the PCASS we can test them to see if they were involved in placing the bomb or actually detonating the bomb. It’s used for troops in the field to screen out the bad people from good people who are trying to do harm to U.S. forces or our coalition forces.”

May to succeed Schwitters

Leader Staff Report

Brig. Gen. Bradley W. May will assume command of Fort Jackson from Brig. Gen. James H. Schwitters, who is retiring this summer.

May

May comes to Fort Jackson from Alexandria, Va., where he served as the director of the Enlisted Personnel Management Directorate of the U.S. Army Human Resources Command.

The Change of Command ceremony is slated for late July.

In his more than 25 years with the Army, May has had stateside assignments in California, Colorado, Virginia, Kentucky and Louisiana, as well as overseas assignments in Germany, Iraq and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

May deployed under Operation Iraqi Freedom March-May 2003 and June 2003-February 2005.

Following his deployment, he was assigned to the Joint Staff as the chief of the Strategy Division in Washington.

He received a Bachelor of Business Administration from Northeast Louisiana University; a Masters of Military Arts and Science from the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and a Masters in Strategic Studies from the U.S. Army Air War College.

Schwitters will be retiring after more than 30 years of military service. He and his wife Rebecca plan to settle in Columbia.

Ask the Garrison Commander

No TV is not a turnoff after all

Entry-level status; cheap family fun

Col. Dixon

Q What is entry-level status?

A For regular Army Soldiers, entry-level status is defined as the first 180 days of continuous active duty or the first 180 days of continuous active duty following a break of more than 92 days of active military service.

For Army National Guard and United States Army Reserve Soldiers, entry-level status begins upon enlistment in the ARNG or USAR.

For Soldiers ordered to Initial Active Duty Training for one continuous period, it terminates 180 days after the beginning of training.

For Soldiers ordered to IADT for the split or alternate training option, it terminates 90 days after beginning Phase II, Advanced Individual Training.

Soldiers completing Phase I Basic Combat Training remain in an entry-level status until 90 days after beginning Phase II.

Q Where can I take my kids for fun without spending a lot of money?

A Blacklight bowling is perfect for families, no matter what age your child is. Blacklight bowling is offered at Century Lanes Bowling Center, every Saturday night 9-11:30 p.m. Rent the lane for $14 an hour, $27 for two hours or $30 for the entire blacklight session. One can also pay by the game: The cost for bowlers 16 and younger is $1.50 per game and $1 for shoe rental; the cost for adults is $3 per game and $3 for shoe rental.

Garrison Fact of the Week

All Department of Defense employees, Army and Air Force Exchange Service employees, Nonappropriated-Fund employees, contract employees who work on the installation, and members of the National Guard and Reserves are eligible to use Fort Jackson Morale, Welfare and Recreation facilities.

COMMENTARY

Spring is finally here. How nice to hear the birds chirping and not having to dress in multiple layers before venturing outside.

What better way to celebrate the rebirth of nature than to follow the emergence of the latest singing sensations on American Idol, right? For sports fans like me, spring means that baseball is finally back, so there's always the option of watching other people exercise after a long day's work.

Well, the good people from the Center for Screen-Time Awareness (I'm not making this up, folks) have different plans.

This week marks the 14th annual "TV-Turnoff Week." The organizers' goal is to substitute screen time with more community-based activities and to promote a healthier lifestyle.

If you're anything like me, the idea of living without TV for a week is horrifying! However, I'm always up to a challenge, so I grudgingly accept that ditching the remote for a week might not kill me after all.

But — what to do with the time that used to be consumed by flickering images (or by crystal-clear resolution for those of you living with high-def)? The average American watches 2.58 hours of TV daily, according to Department of Labor statistics from 2006. Now, I'm no math genius, but that means I'll have to spend about 17 1/2 hours this week on "alternative" activities.

Luckily, it turns out that Fort Jackson has a lot of things to offer those willing to lose the recliner.

Let's start with the great outdoors. If you've never been beyond the main cantonment area on Fort Jackson, you're really missing out. There is an abundance of wildlife on the installation, and hunting and fishing licenses are available at Marion Street Station.

Marion Street Station also offers adventure trips and rental equipment for outdoor activities.

I'll admit that hunting and fishing is not for everyone, but don't reach for the remote yet. Remember the part about "promoting a healthier lifestyle"? Well, the Green Zone Trail on post invites you to take a hike, quite literally. It begins on the corner of Marion Avenue and Semmes Road and takes you on a 5-mile loop.

If your idea of hiking involves hitting a ball into a hole, the Fort Jackson Golf Club offers two 18-hole courses for your enjoyment.

Now, I don't know about you, but those hours spent on the couch staring at an appliance have taken their toll on my physique, if you know what I mean. Thankfully, there's Andy's Fitness Center. Instructors there offer exercise classes for every level and can help those willing get back in shape.

That's all fine, you say, but aren't there any things to do for the entire family? I'm glad you asked. Fort Jackson has a miniature golf course, Palmetto Greens, located close to the MG Robert B. Solomon Center. If you prefer being indoors, there's no better place for family fun than Century Lanes Bowling Center. Of course, there's also Palmetto Falls Water Park, which will open May 24.

All those activities are fun for sure, but sometimes I just want to sit back and relax. So, with the small screen off-limits, what is a Fort Jacksoner to do? If you like to read, you should check out the selection at Thomas Lee Hall Library. In addition to printed material, the library also offers a selection of audio books.

Considering all the options available, 17 1/2 hours may not be enough time. Perhaps I could also turn my computer off to gain a few extra hours.

Author's Note: For more information on these and other activities offered on Fort Jackson, visit www.fortjacksonmwr.com. For more information on TV-Turnoff Week, visit www.tvturnoff.org.

Vet clinic NCOIC wins AMEDD Best Warrior

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Staff Sgt. Julian Wiggins may spend most of his time caring for and treating animals, but he has also proved he is a top warrior.

Wiggins, who is the noncommissioned officer in charge of the Fort Jackson veterinary clinic, won the 2008 Best Warrior competition for U.S. Army Medical Command held April 6-9 at Fort Sam Houston and Camp Bullis, Texas.

"It was a tough competition and it was close all the way to the end," Wiggins said. "But the most challenging (part) was all of the walking we had to do. There was no transportation, so we were rucking it everywhere."

Competitors first took a 100-question test and wrote an essay about current events. Next, they faced off during an Army Physical Fitness Test, competed in rifle qualifications, and appeared before a board of senior NCOs.

They also negotiated a day-and-night land navigation course and obstacle course. Next they treated and evacuated casualties of an improvised explosive device and then cleared a building under fire. The competition culminated with a double elimination combatives tournament.

Wiggins, who competes in mixed martial arts tournaments, was trailing the leader by two points going into the combatives tournament, and then rallied to win the event.

The Fort Jackson Soldier decided not to compete in a mixed martial arts tournament earlier this month at Camp Lejeune, N.C., so that he could focus on the Best Warrior competition.

"I wanted to be 100 percent going before the MEDCOM board," he said.

Wiggins, who has been in the Army for 11 years, is Air Assault and Combat Life-saver qualified.

Command Sgt. Maj. Althea Dixon, MEDCOM command sergeant major, said the purpose of the event is not simply to award the winners.

"We conduct these competitions to recognize the best Soldier and NCOs, but it is primarily about training. It is not just a competition," Dixon said. "We expect each candidate to be well trained when they come, and better trained when they leave. They should take what they learn here back to their units."

For his performance, Wiggins received an Army Commendation Medal, a trophy, a $1,000 Savings Bond, MEDCOM coins and certificates as well as the right to request his assignment of choice. Wiggins will go on to compete in the Department of the Army Best Warrior competition in September at Fort Lee, Va.

"It was a good learning experience. Especially about weapons," he said. "I am especially proud to be the first vet to win this competition."

Post drill sergeants prepare to face off for title

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Fort Jackson drill sergeants will battle not only for bragging rights next week, they will also be fighting for the prestigious title of Drill Sergeant of the Year.

The three-day competition, which is slated for April 28-30, will consist of an Army Physical Fitness Test, hands-on performance tasks, rifle qualification, land navigation and a board appearance.

"The purpose of the competition is to see which competitor rises to the top when faced with a variety of situations, events and changing circumstances," said Sgt. 1st Class Alanna Payne, Fort Jackson 2007 Drill Sergeant of the Year.

One representative from each training brigade and separate Initial Entry Training units assigned or attached to the U.S. Army Training Center and Fort Jackson will participate in the competition. The representatives were chosen following a board appearance.

"The sequence of events and the way the competition will be conducted have not been done at Fort Jackson before," Payne said. "This year's competition will be much more challenging."

The events will be scored on the drill sergeant's performance based on a points scale. "The competitors should work on hands-on, hands-on, hands-on and total Soldier concept," Payne advised.

The winner of the competition will serve as a liaison between drill sergeants and the installation's command group. The drill sergeant will also advise post commanders and command sergeants major on all areas pertaining to drill sergeants and Basic Combat Training Soldiers.

The DSoY also communicates daily with U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command on Basic Combat Training policy issues that affect Fort Jackson and serves as a mentor to the more than 800 drill sergeants on the installation.

"My successor should have an open mind and be ready for changes," Payne said. "(He or she) will also encounter a multitude of outstanding officers and noncommissioned officers.

The winner of this year's competition will also represent Fort Jackson during the TRADOC DSoY competition in June. In the event the Fort Jackson drill sergeant wins the TRADOC event, he will have a permanent change of station to Fort Monroe, Va., and the runner-up will serve as the Fort Jackson DSoY.

Event focuses on widespread impact of the Holocaust

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

The Holocaust is not just a Jewish issue.

This is the 2008 Days of Remembrance guest speaker's very important message to share with the Fort Jackson community.

"The Holocaust is not just a Jewish issue. We were all there," said Stephanie Alexander, Days of Remembrance guest speaker. Genocide, she said, is not unique to what Hitler's Nazi regime did, "In Bosnia, 200,000 Muslims died at the hands of a Serbian-backed government.

"But even earlier in 17th century America, yes, our America, 4,000 Cherokee people died of the cold and hunger in a forced march relocating them from the East to designated western lands."

Alexander, who works at the U.S. Army Chaplain School and Center as a training program specialist, is a Jewish Lay Leader. Despite the installation not having a Jewish chaplain, she has conducted Jewish services at Fort Jackson for the past two years.

She is a member of Beth Shalom Synagogue and is active in the Jewish community working with the Greater Carolinas Association of Rabbis and South Carolina Council of the Holocaust.

The Days of Remembrance will begin at 2 p.m., Tuesday at the Joe E. Mann Center. The theme of the observance, which is being organized by the U.S. Army Drill Sergeant School, is "Do Not Stand Silent: Remembering Kristallnacht 1938."

"This Holocaust thing is far from over. We're still surrounded by anti-Semitism, hatred and intolerance," Alexander said. "Very recently, a Jewish Soldier came to me and related a comment made by a fellow student concerning NBC (Nuclear, Biological and Chemical) training.

"As they donned their chemical masks before entering the gas chamber, the student remarked, 'He should be used to this.' The remark ... referred to the gas chambers used in Nazi Germany in which countless Jewish men, women and children were murdered."

Between 1933 and 1945, it is estimated between 9 million and 11 million people were put to death by the Nazi regime. The majority (an estimated 6 million) were Jews.

In 1980, Congress established Days of Remembrance as an annual commemoration of Holocaust victims. Yom HaShoah is the Hebrew name for Days of Remembrance.

"To speak at Yom HaShoah is a very difficult assignment," Alexander said. "It is also a privilege."

EEO explains service animals

Equal Opportunity Office

Q What is a service animal?

A In accordance with the American with Disabilities Act, a service animal is defined as any guide dog, signal dog or other animal individually trained to provide assistance to a person with a disability. Service animals are working animals, not pets.

Q How can I determine if an animal is a service animal?

A The majority of service animals wear special collars around their necks. In most cases, these service animals are licensed and have identification cards.

Q What can people have service animals for?

A Common jobs of service animals are seeing-eye, alerting people with hearing impairments to sound, assisting with mobility impairments with balance and pulling wheelchairs or carrying and picking up things for a person with mobility impairments.

Q Can service animals be permitted into businesses?

A Yes. Businesses and organizations that serve the public must allow service animals to accompany people with disabilities into the establishment. Examples are restaurants, bowling alleys, libraries, theaters, retail stores, hospitals, parks, health clubs and hotels to name a few.

Q What if a service animal barks, growls or otherwise acts out of control?

A Service animals may be excluded from your facility when their behavior poses a direct threat to the health or safety of others. For example, any service animal that displays vicious behavior toward other guests or customers may be excluded.

to the director, DACA, three scientific studies were done on the device to determine its reliability. The Army conducted two of those studies; the third was contracted out to the Battelle Memorial Institute.

"Our accuracy rate, when you set the inclusives aside, averaged 80 percent," Krapohl said.

Both Krapohl and Waller agree that although PCASS is not 100 percent accurate, it is better than the current options available to Soldiers in the field.

"It's not a silver bullet," Waller said. "It's not perfect, but of all the technologies the National Academy of Sciences agrees that the polygraph and this type of technology is the most accurate. It's better than what the troops do now, which is basically using gut intuition."

"Usually when we say it is less accurate than the polygraph people pay attention to that and say, 'Why are using it if it is less accurate?'" Krapohl said. "We like to point out that we don't have enough polygraphers in the entire government to satisfy the requirements over in the theater.

"Gut instinct reliability is chance (50/50) or slightly better. That's our benchmark. How do we improve about that and make this tool widely available? It (PCASS) gives us incremental validity over what we are doing right now."

Customer Service Corner

The Community FIRST/Army Family Action Plan is an ongoing process that allows community members to submit issues that cannot be fixed by the Interactive Customer Evaluation system. Issues can be viewed or submitted through Community FIRST/AFAP or new issues submitted through the Customer Management Services Web site.

Remember, April is issue submission month for third quarter fiscal year 2008. Submit issues whether they affect Fort Jackson or the entire Army; feedback is important.

Help the community by submitting issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>. Click on "Submit an Issue or Recommendation" or click on the AFAP Logo to submit an issue.

Issues surfaced during the Family Readiness Group Leaders' Course held April 9-10 at Fort Jackson are:

Issue: Lack of guidance/accountability and space for Family Readiness Groups.

Scope: Currently, there is no concrete guidance or designated meeting space for Family Readiness Groups on this installation. There are no designated forms or permits required for fundraising or other FRG-specific events provided to hold FRGs accountable for their actions. Without concrete guidance, FRGs are confused about proper fundraising and installation specific regulations. Also, the lack of FRG specific meeting/training space leads to fewer meetings and less training provided.

Recommendations:

1. Provide an installation handbook to give pertinent guidance to FRGs that is specific to the installation.
2. Design a channel or form so that commanders, units and FRGs are held accountable for their actions; i.e. fundraising permits.
3. A centrally located building designated solely for the use of FRGs for functions, meetings and training.

Issue: Reserve Soldiers Ineligibility for Army Community Services Exceptional Family Member Program.

Scope: Reserve Soldiers who are on active duty status for more than 30 days are currently able to enroll in TRICARE, but are not eligible to enroll in ACS EFMP. This causes undue stress and worry of finding adequate medical attention and care for an exceptional family member.

Recommendation:

Reserve Soldiers who are eligible for TRICARE enrollment, should also be eligible to enroll in the ACS EFMP to ensure the proper care for their dependents while on active duty.

These issues will be sent to the directorate and organizations responsible for resolution/response. Customer Management Services staff is available to provide informational briefings at FRG meetings. Anyone interested should call 751-3425.

A Retiree Focus Group will be held from 8 a.m. to noon, May 20 at the Plans, Analysis and Integration Office, Bldg. 3499 across from Daniel Circle Chapel, and volunteers are needed. Issues that pertain to retirees will be discussed and then briefed directly to the Fort Jackson garrison commander. The issues will then be sent to the directorate or organization that is affected for a response. The issues and the responses will then be published in the Fort Jackson Leader and discussed during the next Installation Action Council. Anyone interested in participating in this focus group should call 751-3425.

Reminder: April is issue submission month. All issues submitted can be viewed, or new issues submitted through the CMS Web site, whether the issues affect Fort Jackson or the entire Army; feedback is important. Submit issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>. Click on "Submit an Issue or Recommendation" or click on the AFAP Logo to submit an issue.

ICE Appreciation

The garrison congratulates the Directorate of Human Resources, specifically the Personnel Automation Work Center, and the Personnel Strength Management Branch. They have achieved a 4.95 and a 4.84 rating, respectively, in employee/staff attitude out of a possible 5.0, for a 12-week period. This is an outstanding performance in customer satisfaction.

Message from the commanding general

I want to take this opportunity to extend my congratulations to the entire Fort Jackson family.

As of 4 April 2008, Fort Jackson has gone two years without losing a Soldier to a motor vehicle fatality. This is due to the concerted effort made by all of you. From the education and enforcement provided by leadership, to the personal responsibility demonstrated by each individual while driving, all of you have done your part.

It is not unreasonable to expect another year without losing a single member of the Fort Jackson family to a needless accident. It will require continued effort on our part. Motor vehicle accidents continue to take an alarming toll on our Soldiers across the Army and TRADOC. The threat is real, ever present, and unforgiving.

We cannot stop now - let's continue to demonstrate why "Victory Starts Here" at Fort Jackson. Leaders at all levels, uniformed and civilian, are stakeholders in safety and I expect the Fort Jackson safety and occupational health plan to be fully implemented throughout your organizations. Don't just talk at your people, make them understand and make them believe.

Remember that composite risk management is an integral part of all activities, including while off-duty. Common sense, situational awareness, and attention to detail are all key defensive components that will help keep us safe.

Be Smart – Be Safe

Army Reserve celebrates 100th anniversary

John J. Kruzel

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — After undergoing a century of change, the Army Reserve is now in the midst of its biggest transformation, the component's chief said.

Lt. Gen. Jack C. Stultz characterized the first 100 years of the Army Reserve as a metamorphosis from an Army medical reserve corps to a strategic force and toward an operational force.

The future of the service, however, will usher in an ever-greater period of transformation, he said.

"Throughout the 100 years, as the Army has changed, the Army Reserve has changed," he said. "Most significantly, I would say, is after Sept. 11, after we've gotten into an extended conflict in the War on Terror, the Army Reserve is in the midst of the biggest transformation we've ever had."

To illustrate the current state of flux, Stultz recalled the differences between now and his early days in the Reserves.

"When I first entered the Army Reserve (after) leaving the active duty in 1979, our mantra was: 'One weekend a month, two weeks in the summer — that's all we ask,'" he said.

"(But) our mantra right now is: When called upon, you're expected to mobilize, deploy and defend your nation," he said. "And if you're a member of the Army Reserve then it will occur during your career, and it will occur in multiple locations."

The Army Reserve of today is engaged with the combat force on an "extended basis" in Iraq, Afghanistan and other parts of the world where U.S. operations are ongoing.

"Now (the Army Reserve's) combat support, service support has to be mobilized on an extended or persistent basis," he said. "That means the Army Reserve is no longer strategic; it's operational."

Reserve members' adaptation is a good news story, Stultz said, because the corps is consolidated into a more committed force that is more prepared, capable and willing to deploy.

"We have grown from 188,000 this time last year, to right now 195,000," he said. "We've increased end strength by 4,000 this fiscal year already, but we're doing with the people who say, 'I know what I'm getting into.'"

The Reserve chief's comments were echoed by his senior enlisted adviser, Command Sgt. Maj. Leon Caffie.

The transformed force is endowed with training, leadership and skills comparable to the active-duty component, Caffie said.

He said he was impressed by the quality of reservists he met over the holidays in Afghanistan and Iraq and during a massive re-enlistment ceremony in Iraq in which he participated in January.

"You can go to the theater; and you can't distinguish between the active-duty, National Guard or Army Reserve Soldiers because that skill set and that quality is so much higher (than in the past)," he said.

The top Reserve officer and enlisted member agree that the Reserve's turning point came in the early 1990s, when Army Reserve Soldiers started being mobilized into operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Caffie said the operations revealed an Army Reserve that was ill-equipped, poorly trained and insufficiently led.

"We had created this strategic force that was really not relevant at all. You had a bunch of numbers, but as far as training and capability, performance at that level wasn't expected," he said. "That changed drastically when the Army Reserve as a whole went from a strategic force to an operational force, and you have seen a significant change in how we do stuff as Army Reserve Soldiers."

In a dramatic departure from the "summer camp" era, today's reservists have been deployed up to four times, Caffie said. Others have made significant personal sacrifices by deploying for a year at a time, he said.

"The combat experience of Army Reserve Soldiers is phenomenal," he said. "Today's Army Reserve force is by far the best-led, -skilled and -equipped Army Reserve I have ever been associated with."

Recruiting standards remain high despite waivers

Donna Miles

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense maintains stringent standards for its recruits, despite an increase in the number of felons accepted by the military services.

A senior defense official said waivers sometimes are granted to people who commit "youthful pranks that went way too far," but not to dangerous criminals.

The military granted waivers to 903 felons in 2007, 511 of them for the Army and 350 for the Marine Corps, Bill Carr, acting deputy under secretary for military personnel policy, said.

These numbers, up from 249 in the Army and 208 for the Marine Corps in 2006, constitute a tiny fraction of all incoming recruits — one half of one percent, Carr said.

Contrary to what media reports imply, the waivers were not granted to hardened criminals fresh out of prison, Carr said. Mostly they are granted to people who made mistakes when they were younger, but then straightened up to become responsible citizens, he said.

The military is extremely judicious in granting the waivers and limits the number granted each year. A general officer must approve all such applications. Those with "sinister crimes" are automatically eliminated. Only those who show they have turned around and have potential in the military get a chance to enlist.

"The military determines that they're worth betting on and gives them a second chance," Carr said.

In a tough recruiting environment, the practice serves the military, too. Two-thirds of the American youth population is disqualified to enlist by today's military entrance standards, said Army Lt. Col. Jonathan Withington, a Pentagon spokesman.

Medical conditions account for most of the disqualifications, and medical waivers make up the biggest percentage of waivers granted.

Of waivers granted to felons, most were to individuals involved in crimes against property. Typically, the offenses occurred years before the waivers were granted, Withington said.

One recruit described in news reports as a "bomber" actually was a young person who blew up a mailbox using a soda bottle full of gunpowder, Carr said. "It was more of a youthful prank than the sinister activity that some of the media suggest," he said. That offense occurred two years before the waiver was granted.

Another recruit had been convicted of involuntary manslaughter resulting from driving under the influence of alcohol three years before receiving the waiver. Several recruits had been convicted of sexual offenses, most involving consensual sex with a minor and typically years before the military waiver was granted.

Carr has a message to parents concerned about who their son or daughter joining the military may serve with.

"They should feel assured that we are very careful about who their children serve alongside," he said. "These are generally people of respectable character who made a terrible move in their youth, but have made a dramatic turnaround."

Soldiers learn to respond to emergency situations

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

The worst of the hurricane has passed, but rain from the rear of the storm is still falling. Under these conditions, 1st Lt. Chris Devenport hated having to turn Carlos Rodriguez and his 2-year-old daughter Emily away from a shelter at the Floyd Spence Center.

“They came here with an animal (a small cat). Under the regulations for the shelter we can’t accept any pets. We can’t make any exception, no matter how big or how small,” explained Devenport, Company D, 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment. “Some of the people seeking shelter are going to be deathly afraid of animals, so if we start making an exception for small cats or small dogs, eventually it’s going to escalate to larger dogs. We don’t want anyone to be afraid to come seek shelter, we want to accept as many as possible.”

Fortunately for Devenport and the Rodriguez family, the scene that played out April 16 was not real. It was the final part of a two-day training in disaster shelter operations sponsored by the Red Cross and the force protection division of the Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security.

“Every year Red Cross and DPTMS force protection get together and train selected military to learn about shelter operations,” said Jo An Miller, Red Cross director. “This training is based on Red Cross training that we do for our staff that goes out on national disasters. It has been adapted for the military to use on military installations in cases of a hurricane, tornado or flooding on an installation.”

Twenty-seven Soldiers from different units across Fort Jackson took part in the training. The first day consisted of classroom learning followed by a tabletop exercise where the Soldiers had to decide on how they would evacuate different areas around post.

On the second day, the Soldiers had to set up an actual disaster relief shelter and respond to the needs of role players affected by a hurricane.

“It teaches these Soldiers who have been tasked with opening these shelters on how to open and manage them once they are up and running,” Miller said. “It also teaches them how to work with the clients who come to the shelter.”

As the victims of the hurricane arrived at the shelter, the Soldiers had to register them, determine if they had any medical (physical and mental) needs, ensure they were not trying to bring anything into the shelter that was against the regulations (such as pets and weapons), as Rodriguez was trying to bring in the family cat, which was against the rules of the shelter according to 1st Lt. Chris Devenport (right), Company C, 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment, through an interpreter, 1st Lt. Ninotchka Rosas, Co. F, 3rd Bn., 13th Inf. Reg.

“It gave the Soldiers who were operating the shelter a chance to see some real-life situations that they might have to deal with in cases of severe weather,” Miller said.

As for the Rodriguez family, “We gave him directions, a point of contact and a phone number to a shelter for animals,” Devenport said. “His situation was unique in the fact that he didn’t have transportation or a phone to call. We made arrangements with people inside the shelter to house his cat in somebody else’s car until the storm was over.”

With that situation resolved, Rodriguez and his daughter were allowed in the shelter to ride out the rest of the storm.

MARKING TIME

Fort Jackson was the beginning of TIME

Karen Soule
Public Affairs Officer

Two Yale University students making plans to set the news-reporting business on fire when they graduated in 1920, encountered an interruption along the way: World War I.

That interruption, however, provided the spark that would ignite a news organ that would revolutionize modern journalism — TIME magazine.

Henry Luce and Briton Haddon arrived at Camp Jackson in November 1918, officer candidates from Yale, ready to join the 65,000 men preparing to deliver the knockout to a weakened German army in France. To their disgust, they remained at Camp Jackson to train the enlistees who would ship out to fight.

But it was while training Soldiers that the idea for TIME was born.

Both Luce and Hadden had led sheltered and privileged lives. They met at age 15 as students at Hotchkiss School, a private boarding school in Connecticut.

Luce was very shy, the son of Presbyterian missionaries living in China. Hadden was a highly competitive boy from Brooklyn, the son of a wealthy stockbroker.

At Hotchkiss, both were involved in school newspapers and this common bond continued into Yale, where Hadden was named chairman of the Yale Daily News in his sophomore year and Luce a part of the news board. Even though they were close friends, they were constantly trying to outdo each other in their journalistic endeavors.

At Camp Jackson, Luce and Hadden met and mingled with common men from across the country for the first time in their lives. It was an exciting time for them, children of privilege who now gained an appreciation for the power and energy of the American people.

Equally important, they discovered the huge gap between those who kept up with news and those who did not. That discovery would eventually lead to their joint venture that would provide news and knowledge to a wide variety of people across America.

One hot night, while walking back to their barracks, they continued on through the drill grounds and the piney woods beyond, talking about the paper they might some day found.

Luce described the occasion later: “I think it was in that walk that TIME began. On that night there was formed an organization. Two boys decided to work together.”

Both Luce and Hadden returned to Yale following the war. After graduation, they went their separate ways before reuniting in 1921 as reporters for the Baltimore News. It was there they started talking about their “paper” again and finally decided to take action. At age 23, they took off for New York with some crude dummy sheets for a news magazine.

In March 1923, Luce and Hadden printed TIME Magazine’s first issue. It was mailed to 9,000 subscribers.

Assistants are indispensable to leaders

Susanne Kappler
Leader Staff

They mainly work behind the scenes without much fanfare or glory, but without the hard work of administrative professionals, business would not run smoothly on Fort Jackson.

Fort Jackson employs 44 civilian administrative professionals. They are trained professionals who not only possess computer knowledge, but also need organizational talent and interpersonal skills to be successful.

Patricia Robinson, administrative assistant for the command group of the U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School, explains that the ability to multitask is essential.

“The phone is ringing, the supervisor is calling me, people are standing around my desk checking on information or trying to make appointments — and still performing well under pressure can be challenging,” she said.

According to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Christopher Wisdom, deputy commandant of USACHCS, Robinson is up to the task.

“Patti Robinson adds great value by managing senior leader calendars, calls, conferences and countless other issues the way an air traffic controller monitors and manages flights and ground traffic,” he said. “She helps mitigate the risk of confusion, conflicts and ‘collisions’ for USACHCS senior leaders in the command wing.”

The fast-paced environment of a military installation also calls for adaptability.

“Each day is unique and different. So I have to be proactive in anticipating any issues or challenges to ensure successful scheduling adjustments, coordination and execution of all actions in support of the chief of staff and the Fort Jackson mission,” said Zeathia Strong, administrative assistant to the Fort Jackson chief of staff.

Besides the clerical duties that come with the job, being able to strike the right chord with people is essential.

“I try to be approachable, I try to be patient and I try very hard to be friendly,” explained Ann Byrum, who works for the commanding general and the deputy commanding officer. “Whether or not I meet those goals, I don’t know. I guess that’s for the jury (to decide). But that’s what I would hope to be.”

Those qualities come in handy in challenging situations.

“We have a lot of phone calls from disgruntled family members who are unhappy because of their perception of Fort Jackson administrative assistants, such as Zeathia Strong, chief of staff, left; Ann Byrum, commanding general; and Patricia Robinson, U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School, keep the installation’s leadership on task and on time — and they do it all behind the scenes.

what’s going on with their loved one here at Fort Jackson,” Byrum said. “But, it’s rewarding being able to help people, especially those who don’t have any idea of the Army (or) Fort Jackson, and they’re so lost and they just need somebody to say, ‘Hey, let me put you in contact with the right people.’”

Col. Kevin Shwedo, Fort Jackson deputy commanding officer, points out that Byrum excels at being a successful “gatekeeper.”

“Ann deals with a lot of people who think each issue needs to go to the commanding general,” he said. “She finds effective ways to divert each action to the most effective respondent. She knows who needs to get contacted to get things done immediately.”

Strong adds that the right attitude is a necessary ingredient for success.

“I believe that it is important to treat people with respect, regardless of their rank or station in life. Some people enter our lives, exit and return again,” Strong said. “Several years ago, I worked for a brigade commander who is now the post commanding general and a battalion commander who is now the deputy commanding officer and a brigade chaplain who is now the deputy commandant of USACHCS.”

The many aspects of the job may not always be obvious to everyone, though.

“My husband’s retired (from the) military, so you would think that he would know a lot of what I do — (but) sometimes I go home and I get the impression he just has no idea of the many facets,” Byrum said. “We do so much of a wide variety of things that I think probably most people don’t have any really good sense of what an admin person does.”

Still, Byrum would not trade for any other job on the installation.

“I love my job,” she said. “I have always told people that I have the best job on Fort Jackson.”

FRGs can roll the dice during bunco night

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

Family Readiness Groups looking for a fresh idea about what to do during get-togethers have a new option. It's bunco time.

The Officers' Club, NCO Club and Magruders Club will each hold a bunco night in April, May and June, respectively, each with a different theme. The Officers' Club will hold the first bunco night Tuesday. The theme is "Gourmet Night." The party starts with drinks and tapas at 5:30 p.m., and the bunco playing begins 7 p.m.

Tapas? Bunco? What does that mean? Tapas, literally, means "small dish."

Bunco is a dice game, played primarily by women, and is a great way to socialize and make new friends.

Don't worry about not knowing how to play — there will be plenty of help available.

NCO Bunco Night will be held May 30 and the theme is "Clothing and Accessories." Magruders will hold the third Bunco Night and the theme is "Spa Night."

All interested players will have the opportunity to enter a grand prize drawing conducted by Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command. Interested players must sign in on an official entry sheet, which will be submitted to FMWRC for the grand prize drawing. The drawing will be held on or about July 30.

The prizes are:

— The grand prize winner from all eligible players who participated during the three-month promotion period is a $4,000 spafinder.com gift card, plus $250 for travel or incidental expenses.

— The second place winner will win a $500 spafinder.com gift card.

Additional prizes may be added or substituted. Drawings will be conducted by FMWRC using randomization methods selected at its sole discretion.

Winners are eligible to win only one prize in the grand prize drawing. There is no cash substitution for prizes awarded. All prize winners are responsible for all local, state and federal taxes associated with winning their prize.

Each night, prizes will be given for Most Wins, Most Buncos and Most Losses.

For information about bunco night or to register a group to attend, call 751-4058.

Immunizations protect children, wipe out diseases

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

Most parents want to do what is best for their children. They know about the importance of car seats, baby gates and other ways to keep them safe. But, what some may not know is that one of the best ways to protect children is to make sure they have all of their vaccinations.

Immunizations can save lives.

Because of advances in medical science, children can be protected against more diseases than ever before. Some diseases that once injured or killed thousands of children have been eliminated completely and others are close to being gone — primarily because of safe and effective vaccines.

One example of the great impact vaccines can have is the eradication of polio in the United States. Polio was once America's most-feared disease causing death and paralysis across the country but today, thanks to vaccination, there are no reports of polio in the United States.

Vaccination is safe and effective.

All vaccines are only given to children after a long and careful review by scientists, doctors and health care professionals. Vaccines will involve some discomfort and may cause pain, redness or tenderness at the site of injection, but this is minimal compared to the pain, discomfort and trauma of the diseases these vaccines prevent.

The most comprehensive scientific studies and reviews have not found a link between vaccines and autism. Groups of experts, including the American Academy of Pediatrics, the Institute of Medicine, the National Institute of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and other federal agencies also agree that vaccines are not responsible for the number of children now recognized to have autism.

Immunization protects others you care about.

Serious vaccine-preventable diseases still occur. Unfortunately, some babies are too young to be vaccinated completely and some people may not be able to receive vaccinations due to allergies, illness, weakened immune systems or other reasons.

To help keep these individuals safe, it is important that adults and children who are able to get vaccinated are fully immunized. This not only protects the entire family, but also helps prevent the spread of these diseases to friends and loved ones.

Immunization protects future generations.

Vaccines have reduced and, in some cases, eliminated many diseases that killed or severely disabled people just a few generations before.

For example, smallpox vaccination helped eradicate that disease worldwide. Children do not have to get smallpox shots any more because the disease no longer exists.

By continuing to vaccinate now, parents in the future may be able to trust that diseases like polio and measles will not infect, cripple or kill children.

For more information about the importance of infant immunization, visit www.cdc.gov/vaccines.

Awareness needed to combat STDs

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

April is Sexually Transmitted Disease Awareness Month, an annual observance to raise public awareness about the impact of sexually transmitted diseases on the lives of Americans and the importance of individuals discussing sexual health with health care providers and, if sexually active, their partners.

— STDs are a major public health issue in the United States.

— The United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimate that there are approximately 19 million new cases of STDs each year, almost half of them among young people ages 15 to 24.

— STDs have an economic impact: Direct medical costs associated with STDs in the U.S. are an estimated $15.3 billion annually.

— There are physical and psychological impacts. Untreated, some STDs can lead to serious health consequences, including infertility.

— Many of those who are infected do not know it. Many STDs do not have any symptoms.

— The only way to know for sure whether anyone has an STD is to get tested.

Chlamydia remains the most commonly reported infectious disease in the United States. In 2006, 1,030,911

Chlamydia diagnoses were reported, up from 976,445 in 2005. Even so, most Chlamydia cases go undiagnosed. It is estimated that there are approximately 2.8 million new cases of Chlamydia in the United States each year.

Women, especially young women, are hit hardest by Chlamydia. Studies have found that Chlamydia is more common among adolescent females than adolescent males, and the long-term consequences of untreated disease are much more severe for females. The Chlamydia case rate for females in 2006 was three times higher than for males.

Because Chlamydia is most common among young women, CDC recommends annual Chlamydia screening for all sexually active women younger than 26, as well as older women with risk factors such as new or multiple sex partners.

Data from one study in a managed-care setting suggest that Chlamydia screening and treatment can reduce the incidence of pelvic inflammatory disease by more than 50 percent. Increased screening efforts are critical to preventing the serious health consequences of this infection, particularly infertility.

For more information, visit www.cdc.gov to download materials, education tools and information to support STD awareness activities.

Train a child with God's promise

Chaplain (Maj.) Claude Crisp
U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School

"Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not turn from it." Proverbs 22:6

This verse is one of the most often quoted Bible verses I know.

I think the reason for its popularity is the fact that these words offer hope for parents that their tireless efforts on behalf of their children will have been worth it.

Sometimes we lie awake at night, wondering if the little things our children do when we're not around will ever turn into something big enough to negatively impact the rest of their lives.

An acceptance of one's parents' life values and principles does not necessarily guarantee positive and wholesome living.
This is where it gets tough.

We want results — so if we are going to teach our children to do right, then we want them to follow that teaching. The implication of the verse above seems to suggest that it will always turn out right, when in reality, we know that when our children get older they may acknowledge our wisdom, while not always following it.

One thing is sure. Only with maturity of years will our children someday declare we were right all along.

God in boldness gave us this promise
"they will not turn from it." What does it mean if it's less than a guarantee?

It means we shouldn't grow weary in our endeavors to raise our children right, and then leave the rest to God. Imagine the condition of our world if parents didn't try.
The results of such neglect would then give us reason to lie awake at night, fearing the little things our children are doing when we are not around.

May God bless all Fort Jackson parents.

Cases of the Week

Three people were injured and taken to the hospital following a traffic accident at the intersection of Lee and Washington roads. The Fort Jackson Fire Department and Moncrief Emergency Medical Services responded to the scene.

A Soldier was located several hours after she was reported missing. The Soldier was participating in a land navigation course at McCrady Training Center from which she did not return. She was located with the help of air support and military personnel.

Tip of the Week

Total prevention of fatigue is impossible, but its effects can be significantly diminished by getting adequate sleep; maintaining good physical fitness and eating habits; moderating the use of alcohol and caffeine; planning and practicing good time management; and maintaining good working conditions.

Some other measures to remedy fatigue are:

— Modifying your workplace environment to promote rest and prevent additional fatigue.

— Rotating duties to avoid boredom, or if possible, changing or exchanging duties with another co-worker.

— Controlling your workload by pacing yourself, avoiding heavily task-loaded activities and those demanding short-term memory or prolonged periods of intense mental activity.

— Engaging in brief periods of physical exercise before performing a task.

— Taking advantage of training opportunities.

A combination of all of the above is probably the best way to reduce the effects of fatigue and be more productive and healthy.

Medical directives ensure wishes are honored

Capt. Richard Donaldson
Legal Assistance Attorney

April 16 was National Health Care Decisions Day. In recognition, the Fort Jackson Office of the Staff Judge Advocate provided health care powers of attorney and living wills on a walk-in basis to anyone eligible to receive legal assistance. However, this was not a one-time event.

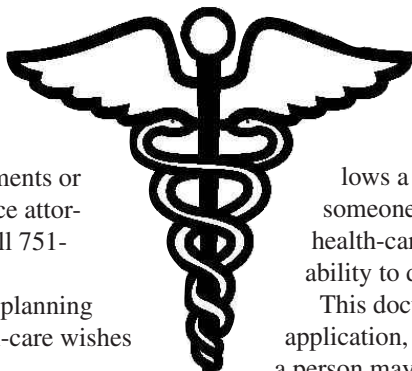

Anyone who needs any of these documents or who would like to talk to a legal-assistance attorney regarding these documents should call 751-4287.

Generally, these documents are estate-planning tools and allow a person to declare health-care wishes in advance of a medical emergency.

A living will states a patient's wishes regarding removal of life-sustaining treatment, should he or she be diagnosed with a terminal condition or permanent vegetative stage.

This document allows anyone to provide advance notice that he or she may not wish to receive such life-sustaining treatment, if such treatment will only serve to slow the dying process or have no medical benefit or increase any chance of recovery.

Generally, these documents are only valid if the patient lacks the ability to express his or her wishes. A living will could be essential should this situation occur.

A health-care power of attorney allows a patient to name a health-care agent, someone whom the patient trusts to make health-care decisions should he or she lack the ability to do so.

This document is broader than a living will in application, as it applies to any situation in which a person may lack the ability to make a decision regarding his or her health care.

You should discuss your medical wishes with a physician or health care professional, as well as family members and potential health-care agents.

For questions regarding these documents, contact the Legal Assistance Office. These documents are prepared

Operation Hours

Fort Jackson's Legal Assistance Office is located in the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, 9475 Ker-shaw Road, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays. Appointments can be made by calling 751-4287.

The office accepts walk-ins for living wills, health care powers of attorney and durable powers of attorney, 1:30-4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Walk-ins are welcome for general legal questions and are accepted 9-11 a.m., Thursdays.

as part of an estate-planning appointment, or on a walk-in basis most Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, 1:30-4 p.m. at the OSJA.

The OSJA will be present at the Retiree Expo and Health Fair as part of the Retiree Appreciation Days celebration on Fort Jackson, at the MG Robert B. Solomon Center Saturday. Health-care powers of attorney and living wills can be provided there.

Underage drinking leads to serious consequences

Sandra Barnes

Army Substance Abuse Program

Alcohol Awareness Month is an effort to educate the public about the problem of underage drinking and its consequences and to inform communities about ways they can help prevent underage alcohol use.

This year's Alcohol Awareness Month theme is Saving Lives: Prevent and Reduce Underage Drinking. This theme goes to the heart of the problem of underage drinking — youth alcohol use is a problem for society.

To address this problem, it is critical to get a broad societal commitment to change norms about underage drinking as well as laws and policies that prohibit sales and marketing to youth.

Alcoholism is the number one drug problem in America and has likely touched everyone in some way. Alcohol abuse causes more than 100,000 deaths each year, long-term heavy drinking damages the liver, nervous system, heart and brain, causes high blood pressure, stomach problems, medication interactions, sexual problems, osteoporosis and cancer.

The statistics paint an alarming picture of underage drinking. Underage drinking is a leading contributor to death from injuries. Injuries are the main cause of death for people younger than 21. Annually, 1,900 people younger than 21 die from alcohol-related traffic accidents.

Underage drinking plays a significant role in risky sexual behavior, including unwanted, unintended and unprotected sexual activity and sex with multiple partners.

Underage drinking is a risk factor for heavy drinking later in life, and continued heavy use of alcohol leads to increased risk across the life span for acute consequences and for medical problems such as cancers of the oral cavity, larynx, pharynx and esophagus; liver cirrhosis; pancreatitis; and hemorrhagic stroke.

The economic cost of underage drinking is estimated to be nearly $62 billion.

Alcohol Awareness Month has made great strides in educating Americans about alcohol and health, particularly underage drinking.

Softball bats heat up on opening night

Susanne Kappler
Leader Staff

The 2008 Fort Jackson softball season began Tuesday with a lopsided game between 187th Ordnance Battalion and Training Support Battalion. The final score was 21-4 in favor of the 187th.

In the second matchup of opening day, MEDDAC beat 3rd Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment, 12-8. The final game of the triple-header featured 3rd Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment and 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment — the final score was not available at press time.

There will be two leagues, one plays on Mondays and Wednesdays, and the other plays Tuesdays and Thursdays.

This season will feature a lot of new faces on Hilton Field Softball Complex.

“The teams have really changed this year. Many of last year’s team members have PCS’d (permanent change of station),” said Cindi Keene, Fort Jackson sports coordinator.

The season will run through Aug. 25 with a midseason exhibition tournament scheduled June 16-26.

The Recruiting and Retention School team fell short of the championship last year, but the team’s coach, Marcus Robinson, is confident about this year’s chances.

“Our team will be awesome this year,” he said. “We can win the championship.”
